UNITED STATES CATHOLICS LED IN DONATIONS.

Rome.—The United States led in the entire world in its donation to the Vatican in 1913 for the carrying on of missionary work. The local American contribution was nearly $400,000. England contributed only $20,000 and Austria which is the most loyal Catholic country in the world gave $12,000. An appeal had been made by Pope Pius for increased donations during the year as a result of the Vatican's celebration of Constantine year. The results show that the United States was the only country which actually responded, by giving more than in previous years.

BUT WILLIAM JENNINGS MAY OBJECT.

Speaker Clark, in a speech in Baltimore last week, predicted that he would be the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1916. Senator Borah of Idaho, he said, would be the Republican nominee and his opponent in the general election.

The leaders of the Democracy are more than anxious to do everything in their power to encourage the Progressive party to remain alive. But have you noticed that when they begin to figure on future campaigns, it is always a Republican who looms up as the foe to be encountered?—Times-Star

LIFE IS JUST ONE SLIT

SKIRT AFTER ANOTHER.

"Every time a feller begins to think the world is gettin' better somebody invents a new dress skirt," remarked Abe Martin. It does look like life is simply one thing after another. Yesterday in this column it was observed that surely the high cost of living could not be laid at the door of the poor gas man and this morning along comes a consumer and shows another curiosity in the shape of a gas bill which jumped from $3.50 in December to $10.15 in January. The Gas Company explains this in another column.—Lexington Leader.

REBUKING THE EDITOR.

The following letter, with no signature attached, was found in the Clipper box this morning. The writer is evidently laboring under the impression that he has been discriminated against in the Clipper's news columns. We offer this party our sincerest apology and assure him that the omission of news items is not intentional and that we will publish any and all news that is fit, providing it is sent in to the office, as the Clipper has no favorites. "Mister editor: I want to noe why hit is that you use so infernal much parshality in your little ole paper. Me an my fokks have ben vistin half dusin time lately an you never sed one word about hit. You run after the big bugs an let the little ones goe. i have ben thinking of subscribin fer the Clipper but i wont do hit now. You no ho this is. "One Ho Has Bin Ronged." —Hennessy (Okla.) Clipper.

RELIGION MUST KEEP IN TOUCH

WITH LIFE OF PEOPLE.

"Separate religion from life, from public life, social life, business life, the life of the community—make it a mere theology or a mere subjective experience or a mere ritualistic cult, and it grows sour and bitter and rancid; it becomes Phariseism or orthodoxy or fanaticism or superstition. On the other hand, if it is kept in constant and vitalizing touch with the life of the people it is kept pure and rational and fruitful of good works. The only way to keep our own religion sane and vital is to make it a power in the life of the community and the nation. The tendency is just as strong today as it was 25 centuries ago to separate religion from life. Perhaps there are as many people today as there were in the days of Amos who think that the attempt to bring the Christian law to bear on trade and business, on city politics and national problems is a profanity of the pulpit and a desecration of the Sabbath."—Dr. Washington Gladden.

RAILWAY BUILDING IN 1913.

A summary of railroad construction in the United States during the year 1913, as compiled by the Railway Age Gazette, shows a total of 3,071 miles of new first track. This mileage is approximately the same as that of 1912 and that of 1911.

The Gazette figures show that new mileage was reported in 1913 by 238 companies in forty-seven States. No new mileage was added in Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware or Alaska. Montana led in new construction with 375 miles. Texas was second with 356 miles. Other States in which more than 100 miles of new line were completed are: Washington, 209 miles; California, 164 miles; North Dakota, 152 miles; Arkansas, 139 miles; Oregon, 123 miles; Illinois 114 miles; Tennessee, 111 miles; Florida, 105 miles; Michigan, 104 miles, and North Carolina, 104 miles.

Kentucky's mileage of new first track for 1913 was 48.34 miles, compared with 119.63 in 1912. In addition there was reported 43.12 miles of second track, compared with 93.70 miles of such track in 1912. This represents double track work by the Louisville & Nashville and by the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific. All the new construction was in Eastern Kentucky. The Beaver Creek branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio, twenty-one miles, was the longest.

The Railway Age Gazette says the outlook is not promising for a busy year in 1914, as only one or two large contracts have been let since July 1. "The small amounts of new lines now under construction indicates that the mileage built in 1914 will show a further decrease, unless conditions change radically in the spring."

Kentucky's prospects for 1914 would seem to be for an amount of construction equal to that of 1913. The Clinchfield is building to the Elkhorn coal fields, as is the Norfolk & Western, and some other extensions seem within the range of probability.—Courier-Journal.

ADVERTISING A CITY.

As was to have been expected the newspapers in the cities near Huntington have taken up with gusto the sensational story of a sermon delivered in Huntington Sunday and printed in Huntington Monday.

Here are some headline assertions: From the Parkersburg State Journal: "Sensation Sprung at Huntington; Details of Drunken Dance Given; Declared That Nine-tenths of Those Present Were Intoxicated; Women Were Conspicuous by Absence of Clothes."

From the Ironton Register: "Drunkness and Indecency Charged by Huntington Minister Against Four Hundred of West Virginia City; Dance Attended By Most Disgraceful Conduct Ever Witnessed in Huntington, Says Witness Who Makes Sworn Statement."

These are but two of many instances that might be cited. It will be noted that the details are not permitted to grow tame as they are told further away from home.

OHIO TOO MUCH GOVERNED.

We have before us State Auditor Donahey's interesting tabular statement of the State's expenditures during the past year. When one glances at the columns of figures for this and for that, he is apt to wonder how much of it is necessary and if a good deal of it couldn't be saved. How much of it the budget commissioner knocked out we cannot say. Maybe he knocked out all he could, but we are certain not all that ought to be thrown aside as needless. Why, it is an awful expense. It is bewildering. Why the legislature doesn't eliminate about 25 per cent., as not doing the people a particle of good, we cannot say.

Much of this expense has grown on the State like the mistletoe on the majestic oak. Can it be possible that we are keeping up government for the sake of government? When one gazes upon that table of expenditures he is almost convinced, as the saying goes, that's about the size of it. There are some things in that statement that don't crystallize to any noticeable extent in the public welfare. And there are other things that convince an untutored mind that we are governed entirely too much.—State Journal.

HOW A RESERVE BANK WILL OPERATE.

To proceed with a simple explanation of the (Currency) bill, let us take the Federal reserve bank that will be located at New Orleans as a starting point. This bank must have a capital of at least $4,000,000. It will have duties to perform for the region assigned to it, which will doubtless comprise the State of Louisiana and several adjacent States in whole or in part. All of the national banks in this district must become members of the system, and must subscribe in proportion to their capital to the stock of what will be called "The Federal Reserve Bank of New Orleans." State banks may also join the system upon their own application. This bank at New Orleans will be managed by a board of nine directors, three of whom will be named by the Central Board at Washington. Three of the other six will be bankers chosen by the membership banks of the district. The other three will be citizens of repute who are not bankers, but who will also be chosen by the membership banks. This bank at New Orleans will hold a part of the reserves of the membership banks, and will do a general banking business upon its own capital.

Let us suppose that in the time of the moving of the cotton crop a great deal of money is needed temporarily in the New Orleans district. This can be supplied in several ways. The Secretary of the Treasury, acting with the Central Reserve Board at Washington, may transfer additional deposits from unused money in the Treasury. The Federal Reserve Board may make temporary transfer to New Orleans of surplus reserve funds in the Federal Reserve Bank at Chicago, or the one at New York. But the thing most particularly to be noted is the fact that the Reserve Bank at New Orleans will be prepared to rediscount cotton bills and commercial paper, and to supply the numerous membership banks with currency to be loaned to their customers upon such paper.—The American Review of Reviews.

THE DAILY NOVELLETT.

His First Words.

Our precious child has talked today.

He said: "Oo-goo-goo-hoo."

But say, what language, is it pray?

Gee whizz, I wish I knew.

All day long she longed for his return that she might tell him.

At last she heard his well-known step coming up the garden walk, and she rushed to let him in.

"Oh, John!" she cried. "The baby can talk!"

"No!" he said, beginning to tremble with joy.

"Yes!" she shouted, throwing her arms about his neck. She had on a pipe organ, and he had never seen her look more fetching.

"He can talk! He can talk!" she cried, and led the way to the nursery, where the baby was sitting up in his cradle, wide awake.

"He only knows one sentence, but he has been saying it all day," she said. "Listen!"

"Oo goo hooa wah," said the baby distinctly.

The father drew a breath of wonder.

"Great Scott!" he breathed, "how does he know that at his age!"

And for three weeks he insisted on buying all the drinks, no matter how large the crowd was.—Louisville Times.

THE CASE FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN A NUTSHELL.

Let the woman stay at home!

One of the pioneer preachers of the West used to stop at the house of the writer's father. Upon one occasion of one of his visits the writer's mother asked him: "Why don't you bring your wife with you sometime?"

And his reply was: "Women and cows should stay at home."

By all means the woman's sphere is the home; but we must redefine the word Home.

Home used to mean the four square walls of the woman's hut. Over the fence, down the lane and throughout the wide world was no home of hers. There was man's place, and there his adventure.

But unfolding time has taught the woman that it is working against cruel odds to try to keep a clean home in a dirty city.

The home instinct in her has gone out to the ends of the earth, seeking to defend itself against the remotest environment.

"She is concerned about a treaty with a foreign country just as she is about the price of bread in her neighborhood market. To admonish the woman to remain within her four walls and to content herself with what she can learn and do there is to commit her to inefficient motherhood and wifehood," writes a woman recently.

So she is interested in voting, she wants a say in the choice of them that make and administer laws, she wants to know about systems of education and to assist in determining who shall teach, she must know how the Church is managed, she attends woman's clubs and discusses philosophy, sociology and literature.

She has not left her home. She has enlarged her home. She is realizing that to redeem one spot of earth one must redeem the whole earth.

Instead of seizing her babies and fleeing to safety in war, she proposes to stop war.

Instead of healing her alcohol-diseased body she declares she will abolish the free vending of poison.

To keep her table wholesome she gets after the food inspectors of the city, state and nation with a sharp stick.

She not only protects her daughters, she says that nowhere in the nation shall there be traffic in virtue.

She has not deserted her home. She is building walls about her country and making of the whole nation a home.

And she will never be satisfied until with broom and soap and antiseptic she has cleaned THE WORLD and made the globe a fit place for children and a decent place for men.

2,640 DAILY NEWSPAPERS

In United States and Canada, in Forty Different Languages.

Philadelphia.—The forty-sixth annual census of the publications of the United States and Canada, published in the American Newspaper Annual and Directory shows that an average of five new publications were started every working day during 1913.

The total number of publications is 24,527.

There are 2,640 dailies—the evening editions outnumbering the morning by about three to one.

There are 572 Sunday papers.

It requires forty different languages to carry the news to the people of this country.

Only four industries now exceed in capital invested and value of products in the business of publishing and printing.

In ten years the output increased 86 per cent., and it is estimated that at present the earnings of newspapers and periodicals average nearly a million and a half dollars per calendar day.

Two-thirds of this amount, perhaps represents the income from advertising.

PARCEL POST SUFFERS.

Chicago, Ill.—Business of the express companies is showing an increase and the volume of parcel post business is showing a slight decrease in Chicago, owing to the new express rates. "It is only natural that we should look for a slight decrease in the volume of parcel post business for a time," said Postmaster Campbell. The express companies call for packages and insure them up to $50. It is not strange, with the new rates, the business shows a gain."

TANGO STORY FALSE

Declares Vatican—Pope Pius Says Official Statement, Was Never Interviewed on Question.

Rome.—There was no surprise here at the complete refutation by the Vatican of the story that Pope Pius saw the tango danced in his private apartments saw nothing wrong with it and recommended the Venetian furlans to tangoers.

"The story is so inconceivably absurd that it does not need a denial," says the statement from the Vatican.

The statement is to the effect that the Pope was never interviewed by anyone in regard to the tango.

The matter of this particular dance was left to the discretion of the various bishops who have explicitly alluded to the modern fashionable dancing, and this, of course, included all dances which are equally objectionable and immoral as the tango.

Makes a Living Buying Old Rugs From Dentists

NEW YORK.—There is at least one man in New York who makes his living by buying worn-out rugs from dental offices," said a New York dentist the other day. "I never heard of a business of this nature until last month, although I have been in the dentistry for 20 years.

But last month a friend of mine dropped in while I was examining the rug in my operating room. It was looking pretty shabby, I found, and I was figuring what kind of a new rug I'd get.

"I'll have to throw this old rug away," I said to my friend.

"Throw it away? What will you do that for? Why don't you sell it?" he asked.

"Sell it?" said I. "There's no one who would give me anything for that worn-out old rug."

"I'll send you a man who'll buy it pretty quick," was the reply.

"I thought my friend was joking, but next day a man arrived first thing in the morning.

"Where's that rug you wanted to sell?" he inquired.

"I showed him. He pulled out a magnifying glass right away and got down on his hands and knees. He started at one corner of the rug and worked inch by inch over the whole surface, scrutinizing it with the most intense care.

"I saw immediately what he was after. He was estimating the value of the minute particles of gold and platinum which had fallen on the rug in the form of dust from my hands when I was standing by the operating chair grinding various bits of work so as to make them a perfect fit. I would not have supposed this dust to be sufficient to be commercially considered, but I was wrong.

"The man finally got up.

"How much do you want for the rug?" he asked.

"I thought I would try a straight shot, without having any idea of the value, and so I said: 'Oh, $50, I should think.'

"To my surprise the rug trader did not express indignation. He merely said that was too high. We did some negotiating, and finally he gave me $33 and took the rug. I thought that was the easiest money I ever got, for I intended to have the old rug thrown on the dump pile.

"I found later that this man does a good business by buying dilapidated rugs from dentists. He cuts the rugs into small squares, and burns them in a machine, which catches the gold and platinum dust."

Patrolman James Kennedy Is Some Fast Runner

SAN FRANCISCO.—If Patrolman James Kennedy can run two given blocks in 15 seconds, how fast can Patrolman James McEachren negotiate the distance? If one must ask this question, he must be prepared to do some running himself, because of what happened in the Richmond not so long ago.

McEachren is an athlete, as his Portola records will evidence. That is why, the other night, when the policeman chanced to encounter some of his fellows at a certain corner, he was lured into a heated argument.

"This Jim Kennedy is some runner," was the sentence that greeted McEachren, as he joined the group. "He ran these two blocks in 15 seconds the other night, and I'll bet no one else can do it."

As was meant, McEachren took this as a tentative challenge. It took about three minutes for him to offer to demonstrate that Kennedy was no wonder, McEachren having figured the distance at about 120 yards. A stop watch was produced, McEachren stopped off gun, uniform coat and helmet, and with the understanding that he was to start with the blowing of a police whistle, he walked off toward the given starting point.

As McEachren disappeared in the darkness, the others were joined by the patrol sergeant of the section, who had slipped up unaware.

"Where's McEachren?" asked the sergeant.

"He was here a minute ago," replied one of the group. "He walked up the block, but if you chip your whistle I think he will join you out."

The sergeant raised his whistle and blew a shrill blast. At the first sound there came out of the night a clattering noise resembling nothing the sergeant could imagine.

Even as the ranking officer prepared to voice his surprise there hove into sight a hatless, coatless figure that catapulted itself with the speed of an Arthur Duffy directly toward the sergeant. It was McEachren. The whistle had brought him.

What transpired next is a secret, as also is the time it took McEachren to make the distance, for his companions, overcoming curiosity, discreetly had faded away.

Derrick Hoists Horse Lying on Back in a Hole

DETROIT, MICH.—Thousands of persons the other afternoon gathered on Griswold street and clustered in the windows of adjoining office buildings as the police strove to rescue a blind horse which had fallen into a ten-foot areaway. Business was halted until the animal had been extricated.

For more than two hours the animal lay on its back at the bottom of the areaway while the police and volunteer rescuers pondered over ways and means of getting it out. The areaway is about 15 feet long, 5 feet wide and 10 feet deep.

The police found it impossible to use their tripod derrick, which is used to raise horses which have slipped on wet pavements, because there was no ledge in the adjacent building wall on which a pole could be rested. The police were puzzled how to proceed. A spectator suggested a moving van hoisting outfit. The animal welfare ambulance with ropes and tackle was also summoned. With all this apparatus on the scene the rescuers were still unable to hit on a feasible plan.

Finally one of the officers expressed the opinion that the trick might be turned by running a stout beam out from a second story window of a building, attaching hoisting tackle to it and obtaining a hoisting engine to provide the lifting power. While the beam was being put in place an officer borrowed a hoisting engine from a construction job in the neighborhood. Two other officers descended into the areaway and at the risk of being injured by the frantic animal fastened ropes and chains around the horse. The engine was then started and the horse was slowly lifted from the hole and deposited gently on the ground while the big crowd cheered.

Examination by a veterinary surgeon revealed the fact that the horse, although it had fallen on its back, was not injured beyond bruises.

Blushing One Had Gone With a Handsomer Man

COLUMBUS, IND.—Joseph Walters is creaking around in the meanest pair of new shoes a man ever wore. Every now and again he bends over and looks into the depths of his patent leather spats and when he does large, briny tears trickle off his nose and spatter on the boots that lost a bride for him. And a charming young woman, who was Miss Mary Moore and who was to have been Mrs. Joseph Walters the other afternoon, is Mrs. Charles Hovis today.

All arrangements had been made for Mr. Walters to marry Miss Moore. He put on a suit of clothes that looked as though it had been painted on, wore a late model collar that left him speechless and was all ready for the marriage when some one told him his shoes spoiled the picture. He told them that he only had 15 minutes and couldn't wait to buy any, but his friends told him to delay the wedding. So, away Mr. Walters sped for the shoes.

In the meantime, Charles Hovis, Walters' most eligible rival, stopped at Miss Moore's to say good-bye forever. After a time it began to look as if he would have forever to say it. Finally Charley up and asked her. She said: "I will," and she did. When Walters arrived he saw her standing with his rival, before an alderman.

He kicked himself with his nice new shoes.

SHE DREAMED DREAMS

By BRYANT C. ROGERS.

It was about two years after the death of Amos Taylor's wife that he sat on a sawlog in his mill yard one day with Deacon Goodhue.

"Brother Amos," the deacon began, "there are reports about that you are to take another wife."

"Reports be darned!" replied the hearty widower.

"It is reported that you have selected Miss Hannah Rathburn."

"The report lies, deacon!"

"A very estimable lady."

"She's an old maid!"

"Yes, she has arrived at years of discretion."

"You mean years of silliness and homesickness. Say, deacon, the only time I ever spoke ten words to her at once was at the church strawberry festival, last year, and then what did I say? I said that I'd rather have strawberries than huckleberries any day in the week."

"And what did she say," asked the deacon.

"She said she had, too."

The deacon arose with a sigh and brushed the dust.

"Then if any one should ask Mrs. Goodhue—"

"She can tell them that I'm getting along too well to want to marry any woman on earth. I can cook, sweep, make a bed, darn my own socks, and patch my own trousers, and what do I want to get married again for?"

The deacon sighed again and wandered away, and Amos looked after him and growled: "Me marry Hannah Rathburn! Well, it will be when bull-thistles grow grapes!"

Mrs. George Ross, widow of the late George Ross, the village carpenter, had been a widow about as long as Amos Taylor had been a widower.

A few people had wondered if she would marry again, but no one had connected her name with any widower.

It came to the ears of Mrs. Ross that the old maid Rathburn had set her cap for Amos, and that Amos seemed rather willing to be caught.

On the third day after the talk on the sawlog the widow Ross appeared at the sawmill and found Amos stacking lumber. He cheerfully left his job, and as they sat down on a plank she said:

"Mr. Taylor, this is not a business call."

"No."

"You may think it a very silly one."

"I guess not."

"Last night I dreamed that you fell into the millpond here."

"I've come mighty nigh it several times lately."

"You were being swept over the dam when—"

"By thunder!"

"When Hannah Rathburn appeared. She waved her hands and screamed. It seemed that she was about to faint when she braced up and plunged in to your assistance."

"And was drowned herself?"

"No; she reached you and swam ashore with you, and you were so grateful that you married her within an hour."

"Then I must have had all the brains soaked out of me!" he exclaimed as he pounded the plank with his fist.

"I never did attach much significance to dreams," said the widow as she prepared to move off; "but I should take it from this that Hannah is going to save your life in reality. If she does your gratitude would—"

"It would do nothing of the kind! If she saves it I'll give her the lumber to build a chicken coop, but she need not expect anything further."

Three or four days elapsed, and then she repeated her call. Amos saw her a long distance down the road and was ready to greet her.

"By George, but have you come to tell me that you have been dreaming again?"

"One can't help what she dreams, can she?" she smiled.

"Was it about Hanner?"

"Yes, poor girl. In my dreams last night I saw her save your life again. Surely her thoughts must be on you."

"She can think and be darned, but how did the dream go?"

"You were walking across a field with your hands under your coat-tails and your eyes watching the clouds. Suddenly a precipice yawned at your feet. You did not see your danger. Three steps more and you would be dashed to the rocks a thousand feet below. At that critical moment a voice cried out:

"Hold, Amos—back, my love!"

"And I backed?" asked Amos.

"You did."

"And it was Hanner that hollered at me?"

"It was. She not only shouted at you, but dashed forward and grabbed you by the coat-tails and hauled you back from the brink of death."

"The brink of a mud puddle! Did I marry her again?"

"You did."

"Then I ought to be kicked, even if it was a dream. Do you figger that it's Hanner's thinking of me all the time that makes you dream?"

"Poor, poor Hannah!" was the tribute of the widow as she turned homeward.

When four days had passed without another call at the sawmill Amos appeared on Mrs. Ross' doorstep. On being invited in he almost whispered: "Any more dreams?"

"You have a water jug at the sawmill, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"A lot of potato bugs which had been eating Paris green might crawl into it and poison the water if the cork was left out."

"And if you were about to drink and Hannah Rathburn suddenly appeared and dashed the jug from your hands?"

"Butted in again, did she?"

"But poor Hannah couldn't stand by and see you poison yourself."

"Poor Hannah to Texas! This evening I'm coming to ask you to marry me! Think it over."

"Who can fathom a widow's heart?"

"Who can guard against a widow's wiles?"

THE AMERICAN HOME

WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A few years ago a "cement house" was felt to be an "uncertain quantity!" and here and there, even to this day, we find a few lingering remnants of the old prejudice against this type of construction. But now that the manufacture of Portland cement has been mechanically and scientifically perfected, and experience has taught the world absolutely safe and reliable methods of using it in the mixing and structural application of concrete, people everywhere are coming in increasing numbers to recognize that the cement house may be just as attractive as any other, just as dry and healthful and light and cheery, and may possibly be in the long run just a little bit the most economical.

In the accompanying perspective and floor plan we illustrate a very attractive little house design especially adapted to cement stucco construction, a type of construction which is forcing its way into increasing favor because of its pleasing appearance when appropriately designed, and its comparative cheapness. This house is of the characteristic western bungalow style. It is very compact and convenient in arrangement, all space being used to good advantage. Five good-sized rooms are provided, besides bath room and pantry, each room being very well lighted and each bedroom having a capacious closet.

Many practical builders have said that the bungalow is a fad, no doubt good enough, it is true, for southern California, or the southern states, such as Florida and Louisiana, but in the main not suitable for practical building throughout the country at large. It has been affirmed that the cost of the bungalow style dwelling is far in excess of that of the ordinary type two-story house providing the same accommodations.

Criticism against the bungalow have been due, not so much to the real characteristics of the style itself, as to the over-enthusiasm of its devotees, who have advocated it for purposes and locations for which it was never intended.

Designed originally for summer cottage work and for spacious building sites, preferably of a hilly nature, there have been too many instances where this type of dwelling has been squeezed into a narrow city lot and put in between high houses of two or three stories, much to the detriment of the typical bungalow style. Much very peculiar art has been perpetrated in the name of the bungalow, and it has to account for many freakish dwellings for which it is not in any way to blame.

We have never happened to see a bungalow style office building, nor do we remember having heard of one; still, what is almost as bad, the bungalow style church is quite a common thing in many of our cities and suburbs. These are uses never contemplated by the originators of the bungalow in this country, and should not be charged up against the style. The bungalow, rightly understood, is an artistically designed cottage, and with that sphere has some exceedingly creditable features of work to show.

The estimated cost of the house here shown ranges from $2,800 to $3,000, depending to some extent on the locality and on local market conditions of material and labor. The design has that simplicity and directness which are the keynotes characteristic of the bungalow style of house.

At a cost no greater than for a plain, unadorned cottage with the same accommodations, a real home-like, cozy and attractive dwelling is secured.

The porch, as can be seen, is a prominent feature adding to the external appearance; and the same is true of every typical bungalow. This one is 6 feet wide by 19 feet 6 inches long, extending along almost the entire front of the dwelling, supported by massive pillars, and the coping of the inclosing wall affording a convenient scheme of further adornment by the use of flower boxes and vases. It forms not only the main decorative features of the front of the building, but serves the extremely practical end of being the outdoor living room for the family in summer weather.

Entering the house, we find the entire front portion given up to a living room, 16 by 14 feet, opening directly into a spacious dining room, 12 by 14 feet, the latter having a large mannel and fireplace adding much to the pleasing home-likeness of the interior. Both of these rooms are nicely lighted, and provide the accommodations for the necessary furniture for convenient housekeeping. The built-in space in the dining room near the kitchen door is just the location which a built-in sideboard or buffet should have to be most convenient and ornamentally located. There are numerous stock designs for built-in sideboards, as well as for other pieces of built-in furniture, which can be had at very small cost.

The kitchen connects directly with the dining room, giving convenient service, and the pantry is also conveniently located near the back porch entrance and the cellar stairway. A hall leads directly from the living room back to the bath room.

Doors lead into this hall-way, affording easy access also from kitchen and bedrooms to the bath room.

The bedrooms in this cottage both lie on the same side of the house. Each is 12 feet 6 inches by 10 feet, and well lighted, the closets forming a feature that will be much appreciated by the housewife.

The exterior material for this bungalow is Portland cement stucco, which lends itself readily to a great variety of schemes of ornamentation. The body of the wall may be either wood or steel framework, or it may be built up of brick or concrete block or hollow tile. If built of molded shapes, the stucco may be plastered on directly; but if of framework, the stucco must be carried by lathing, preferably of wire mesh or of one of the forms of expanded metal lath, which must be fastened firmly to the frame, but sufficiently loose to allow for expansion and contraction, thus preventing the formation of cracks. The exterior finish may be of rough plaster effect, or pebble-dash, or may embody a color scheme secured by the use of colored aggregates exposed by brushing and acid-washing, or obtained by mixing mineral colors with the mortar or by the external application of appropriate color finishes. The use of mosaics of colored tiling or angular fragments of vitreous material, is another possibility that offers itself. The massive chimney leading up from the grate at one end of the dining room is in itself an important element in the exterior scheme of artistic ornamentation.

The Stork Brings Shoes.

A certain Kansas shoe firm has evolved an advertising scheme which at once contains an element of human interest and good business pulling powers. This house watches the local birth record carefully, and sends to each mother the following letter:

"We've heard the good news, and understand the stork left a 'million-dollar' package at your home recently. That's fine—you have our congratulations.

"We sincerely hope the little stranger keeps well, grows strong and healthy, and proves to be a priceless addition to your family.

"May we have the pleasure of presenting you with its first pair of shoes? Cordially yours,

"BLANK & CO.

"P. S.—Please bring this letter with you and receive baby's first shoes, with our compliments."

The results of this scheme have been astonishing, it is said.

Enter the house, we find the entire front portion given up to a living room, 16 by 14 feet, opening directly into a spacious dining room, 12 by 14 feet, the latter having a large mannel and fireplace adding much to the pleasing home-likeness of the interior. Both of these rooms are nicely lighted, and provide the accommodations for the necessary furniture for convenient housekeeping. The built-in space in the dining room near the kitchen door is just the location which a built-in sideboard or buffet should have to be most convenient and ornamentally located. There are numerous stock designs for built-in sideboards, as well as for other pieces of built-in furniture, which can be had at very small cost.

The kitchen connects directly with the dining room, giving convenient service, and the pantry is also conveniently located near the back porch entrance and the cellar stairway. A hall leads directly from the living room back to the bath room.

Doors lead into this hall-way, affording easy access also from kitchen and bedrooms to the bath room.

And it's coming as sure as fate, because the people know where to find the good clothing at the best prices. You can't take their eye off the bean pole by telling them to take a chance. They are not like the cross-eyed man. They are going where they are looking and you bet your bottom dollar they are buying. Why? Because the clothing is all new 1914 styles, guaranteed, and what is more they are waited on by clever gentlemen who can put them on the back three times before they can turn around. TOMORROW'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Good and Bad Thoughts.

You can tell a man's character by the company he keeps. What kind of thoughts are you harboring? Every city has its evil minded class. Maysville has her share. Men who prefer a shady story to a clean one. Who twist every thing they see or hear into the double meaning for the sake of vulgarity. Pity such who have so set their eyes for the dark things that the good is shut out of their lives. To them all people are bad; all purity impure; all decency a sham.

A man started to tell a foul story in the presence of U. S. Grant before proceeding he said: "I guess there are no ladies here," when Mr. Grant said: "No, but there are some gentlemen here." The story was not told. It is no mark of weakness to refrain from the telling the vulgar or to refuse to derame by gossip but it is the greatest mark of manhood not to do so. One other local application of the next Sunday School lesson is that it pays to be out and open in our stand for right. The devil got his second hold on some local characters because they tried to hide their religion. They put their light under a bushel and it went out. It would pay every person to examine his life and see whether by his words and conduct he is not casting a shadow across the pathway of righteousness. See page two of this issue for fuller comment on the lesson.

Six to Seven Hundred Convicts in the Two State Prisons Now Have an Opportunity to Apply for Their Release After Serving the Shortest Part of Their Term.

Frankfort, Ky., February 6.—The Court of Appeals today held that indeterminate sentence convicts are entitled to a parole when their minimum term expires. This will result in the liberation of hundreds of convicts. Concerning the probable effect of the Court of Appeals' decision, D. E. O'Sullivan, chairman of the Prison Board, said the decision will release from six hundred to seven hundred prisoners in the two penitentiaries. Every man sentenced under the indeterminate law since June 18, 1910, will eventually be affected by the decision.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, and stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell. I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good."

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together. My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling? If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century. Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. Farmers

Have you ever tried our way of borrowing money to pay for a farm?

You, of course, know that most farms are sold for one-third cash and the balance of the payment is represented by lien notes due in one and two years. You also know that there are times when it is impossible to pay these notes when they become due.

Our specialty is lending money on good farms for LONG PERIODS. Wouldn't you rather have five years to pay the balance than two years?

Any one expecting to buy farms this March will do well to come in and consult us about getting the money.

We have been giving satisfactory service for 24 years.

ELECTRIC SIGNS!

The distinguishing air of quality which a first-class Electric Sign gives to a store is the element which gives a sign its greatest value as an advertising medium and investment. The impression it makes is good. It blazes forth to the public that there is business enterprise, merchandise and methods up-to-date. It affects the entire atmosphere of the business district. The stranger says, "It is a live town," and publishes it abroad.

It is the Sign of the Times.
